Mount Seymour Provincial Park features 3,508 hectares and offers viewpoints overlooking Burrard Inlet, the city of Vancouver. The park has an extensive trail network, and many of the trails lead to notable park features and spectacular lookouts. Here are things to do and see while you are visiting.

Hiking

Mt Seymour has 14 hiking trails of varying difficulty and length, offering excellent wildlife viewing opportunities. Obey posted signs and stay on designated marked trails to decrease erosion and trail deterioration, so walking around freely is not allowed. Boardwalks may be slippery.

Mountain Biking

Mountain biking is permitted only on designated trails within the park boundary. Trail maps are available online and on kiosks (亭子) at each day-use area. Riders can enjoy the natural scenery along the trail, and it is the responsibility of the riders to know whether the trail they are riding is legal.

Fishing

Elsay Lake, accessed by trail only, can be fished but is not stocked. Sitting by the lake, the beautiful scenery is right in front. And anyone fishing or angling must have an appropriate license and anyone fishing overnight is encouraged to post emergency contact information but fires are not permitted anytime within the park.

Winter Recreation

Winter recreation opportunities include ski touring, downhill skiing and snowboarding. Park visitors interested in sightseeing or recreating in the Controlled Recreation Area managed by Mt Seymour must purchase a pass.

Mountain weather can change quickly. If you become lost or disoriented, stay where you are until the weather clears or you are found. Never leave the trail! Leave a trip plan with a friend in advance. Enjoy your time at Mount Seymour Provincial Park and help us preserve this beautiful natural space for future generations.

B

Keira Knightley, a British actress, has undeniably left an indelible mark on the film industry. With her strikingly delicate yet expressive features, she is famed for roles in films like Pirates of the Caribbean series and Atonement, starting her acting career at a young age and achieving significant success in the film industry. But she may have gotten her start in Hollywood too early.

At age 16, the London-born actress appeared in the unexpected 2002 box-office hit Bend It Like Beckham. She soon found herself in near-constant demand, in both the U.K. and the U.S. “I had a five-year period between the ages of 17 and 21-ish, and I’m never going to have that kind of success again,” says Knightley, now 39. Knightley admits that this period of intense success is unlikely to happen again. She also expresses her sadness about the loss of privacy during her teenage years, “It’s very cruel to have your privacy taken away in your teenage years.”

Reflecting on her role in 2003's Love Actually, she considers it inappropriate for her age. In one scene, her newly married character opens the front door to her husband's best friend, played by Andrew Lincoln, then 30, who conveys his love to her with a series of cue cards. Moved as she is, in the end, she rejects his love. While filming the scene, director Richard Curtis told her to stop reacting as if the gesture was inappropriate. "And I'm like, 'but it is quite strange.' Also, I knew I was 17. It only seems like a few years ago that everybody else realized I was 17."

Having started acting professionally at 6, Knightley is hesitant to let her daughters, aged 9 and 5, follow the same path. Interestingly, they haven't shown an inclination either. "One wants to be a sweet-shop owner," she says. "The other one a bear. I don't think that's going to work, but personally speaking, premature fame is not necessarily a good thing."

24. What film made Knightley unexpectedly popular?

- A. Pirates of the Caribbean. B. Atonement.
C. Bend It Like Beckham. D. Love Actually.

25. Why did Knightley feel uncomfortable in her scene in Love Actually?

- A. It misrepresented young love.
B. It didn't match her acting style.
C. It stressed the age gap with the actor.
D. It was a bit mature for her young age.

26. What made Knightley unwilling for her daughters to be actresses?

- A. The same repetitive life.
B. Her first-hand experience.
C. Their lack of acting skills.
D. The competitive film industry.

27. Where is the text probably from?

- A. A book review.
- B. A magazine.
- C. A drama script.
- D. An autobiography.

C

As the proverb says, a straw shows which way the wind blows. A new study published by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) shows that the H5N1 bird flu virus is probably circulating undetected in domestic animals in many parts of the country and may be infecting unaware vets (兽医).

In the health agency's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, a group of researchers from the CDC, the Ohio Department of Health and the American Association of Bovine Practitioners reported the results of analysis they conducted on 150 cow vets from 46 states and Canada. They found that three of them had antibodies for the H5N1 bird flu virus in their blood. However, none of the infected vets recalled having any symptoms, including conjunctivitis, or pink eye, the most commonly reported symptom in human cases.

Seema Lakdawala, a microbiologist at Emory University in Atlanta, who was not involved in the research, said she was surprised that only 2% of the vets surveyed tested positive for the antibodies, considering another CDC study showed that 17% of dairy workers sampled had been infected. But she said she was even more surprised that none of them had known they were infected or that they had worked with infected animals.

"These surprising results indicate that serum surveillance (血清检测) studies are important to inform risk of infections that are going unnoticed," she said. "Vets are on the front line of the outbreak, and increased biosafety practices like respiratory and eye protection should reduce their exposure risk."

Jennifer Nuzzo, director of the Pandemic Center at Brown University, described the study as "good and bad news study." "On the one hand, we see concerning evidence that there may be more H5N1 outbreaks on farms than being reported," she said, "On the other hand, I'm reassured that there isn't evidence that infections among vets have been widespread."

However, John Korslund, a U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist, said that finding H5N1 antibodies in the blood of vets was an "interesting but very imprecise way to measure state cattle incidence, so we need follow-up study."

28. Why is the proverb in paragraph 1 mentioned?

- A. To describe a fact.
- B. To introduce the study.
- C. To explain an issue.
- D. To present an opinion.

29. What is paragraph 2 mainly about?

- A. The findings of the analysis.
- B. The symptoms of the vets.
- C. The causes of H5N1 bird flu.
- D. The basic logic of the study.

30. What surprised Seema Lakdawala the most?

- A. The infected vets' unawareness of the issue.
- B. The 17% infection rate among dairy workers.
- C. The high number of positive test results in vets.
- D. The risk of unrecognized infections in cows and vets.

31. What aspect should be improved in the follow-up study?

- A. The size of the tested group.
- B. The individual samples.
- C. The data analysis procedure.
- D. The measuring method.

D

OpenAI, the company behind the artificial intelligence tool ChatGPT, has set out restructuring plans to make it easier for it to raise money and remove restrictions made by its non-profit parent (母公司).

OpenAI reveals its for-profit unit would become a public benefit corporation, a company required to consider the interests of society as well as shareholder (股东) value. The non-profit parent would have “a significant interest” in the public benefit corporation, OpenAI said in a blog-post, adding that it would be one of the “best resourced non-profits in history.”

OpenAI has been looking to make changes to its rules to make it easier for investors to profit when they inject new investment into the firm. OpenAI was founded in 2015 as a research-focused non-profit but created a for-profit unit four years later to secure funding for the high costs of AI development. Its unusual structure gave control of the for-profit unit to the non-profit.

A $6.6 billion fundraising by OpenAI, which valued it at $157 billion, was conditional on it being able to remove a profit limit and move towards being a more conventional company.

“We again need to raise more money than we’d imagined. Investors want to back us but they need conventional equity (股东权益) and a less unique structure,” OpenAI said. “The hundreds of billions of dollars that companies are investing into AI show what it will take for OpenAI to continue pursuing the mission.”

“This is the critical step the company needs in order to continue fundraising,” said Gil Luria, analyst with DA Davidson & Co. The key to the announcement, he said, was that the for-profit side of OpenAI “will run and control OpenAI’s operations and business.” For its AI competitors, it’s a different matter. Musk, an OpenAI co-founder, is trying to preclude the plan, as is Meta Platforms, which is developing a competitor against ChatGPT named Meta AI.

32. What is a public benefit corporation required to do?
- A. Operate its non-profit parent independently.
  - B. Focus only on maximizing shareholder value.
  - C. Reduce the amount of money raised from investors.
  - D. Combine the interests of society and shareholder value.
33. Why does OpenAI believe it needs to restructure its operations in paragraph 5?
- A. To attract more investors and simplify the structure.
  - B. To push forward its development goals on AI safety.
  - C. To settle conflicts with its non-profit parent organization.
  - D. To prevent competitors from taking control of its operations.
34. What does the underlined word “preclude” in paragraph 6 mean?
- A. Design.
  - B. Prevent.
  - C. Back.
  - D. Follow.
35. Which of the following is the best title for the text?
- A. OpenAI to Keep Influencing Shareholders
  - B. OpenAI to Defend ChatGPT from Criticism
  - C. OpenAI to Relax Control over Its For-Profit Unit
  - D. OpenAI to Spend Funds on Artificial Intelligence

第二节（共 5 小题；每小题 2.5 分，满分 12.5 分）

根据短文内容，从短文后的选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Ugh! You swear you had your keys a second ago, and now they're just gone! Before you panic, take a deep breath. 36. Losing things is a part of life, but finding them doesn't have to be a nerve-wracking rush. In this article, we'll teach you where you can look and how you can retrace your steps to find lost objects.

Identify what makes your missing object stand out in its environment. It might be its size, color, texture or shape. 37 It will make the process faster and more efficient. Instead of looking at everything in a space, this approach helps you focus your attention only on objects with that distinction.

Look in places where you've lost this item before. Do you tend to lose your keys or student cards often? If so, it may have ended up in a similar place as before. Think about where your common lost objects tend to be lost. For example, maybe you have a habit of leaving your keys in the lock or your bag in the car. 38

Try looking at the room from a new angle. If you've retraced your steps, gone through all the motions, and still haven't found anything, change your perspective. Crawl instead of walking down the hall. 39 Seeing things from a different point of view can help you notice details you may have missed before.

40 Scattered and crowded areas make it easier to lose objects, as things can fall under other things or get buried beneath piles. Regularly clean and tidy up living spaces, so you won't have to spend more time looking for things later on.

- A. Or sit where you were standing.
- B. Then search based on that unique feature.
- C. Look in the messiest areas of your living space.
- D. Everyone misplaces things every now and again.
- E. Check these places before extending your search.
- F. The best thing you can do to avoid losing things is be organized.
- G. Thinking about the last time you saw it helps you retrace your steps.

第二节（满分 25 分）

阅读下面短文，根据所给情节进行续写，使之构成一个完整的故事。

Tim had always struggled with his weight. He loved food, but at school, he often found himself the target of cruel jokes and teasing.

His classmates would call him names like “Big Tim” and make fun of his size, and though Tim tried to ignore it, it still hurt. Every day, he wished he could be like the athletic kids, running fast and playing sports with ease, but that always seemed out of reach.

One day, a group of his classmates—three boys who were notorious for their pranks (恶作剧)—decided to play a trick on him. They knew Tim wasn’t athletic, and they thought it would be funny to sign him up for the upcoming school’s long-distance race. They figured he’d panic when he found out and that it would be fun to watch him fail. Without telling Tim, they registered his name for the race.

On race day, as Tim walked across the track trying to join his classmates in the stands, he saw some of them holding giant posters of his face with slogans like “The Big Runner” and “Go Tim!” He froze. He realized what had happened—the boys had tricked him into racing. His face turned red with embarrassment, but the crowd was already watching, and he felt trapped.

The starting gun fired, and to everyone’s surprise, Tim began to jog. It wasn’t fast, and he could barely keep up with the other runners, but he kept moving. His legs burned with each step, and his breath came in sharp gasps, but he didn’t stop. His classmates’ laughter echoed in his ears, but he ignored it.

As the race went on, something shifted. A few students who weren’t part of the prank started cheering for him. “Come on, Tim! You can do it!” they yelled. Their encouragement made Tim feel lighter, and his pace picked up just a little. It wasn’t about winning anymore; it was about proving to himself that he could finish.

注意：

1. 续写词数应为 150 个左右；
2. 请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。

By the time Tim reached the final lap, he was tired out.

The crowd erupted in applause.
